<Consultation on the role of referendums in the democratic process

Consultation on the role of referendums in the democratic process

(1) The Scottish Ministers must, before the expiry of the period of 3 months beginning with the day of Royal Assent, issue a consultation about the matters in subsection (2).

(2) The matters are—

(a) the role of referendums in the democratic process in Scotland,
(b) the regulation of campaigning using social media and other online services in a referendum,
(c) the consequences (in terms of criminal penalties that may be imposed on a person and in terms of the effect on the validity of the result) of making or publishing false campaign statements in relation to—

(i) the conduct of the poll for a referendum (including in particular, but not limited to, the date of the poll, who is entitled to vote, registration for voting, the manner of voting and the manner of counting of votes),
(ii) matters connected to the question on which the referendum is being held,
(iii) the consequences of a particular outcome to the referendum,

(d) such other matters relating to referendums, conduct rules and campaign rules as the Scottish Ministers consider appropriate.

(3) To comply with subsection (1), the Scottish Ministers must in particular—

(a) lay a copy of the consultation before the Scottish Parliament,

(b) allow a period of no less than 90 days after the consultation is laid before the Parliament for representations to be made to them,

(c) take reasonable steps to—

(i) publicise the consultation to the general public,

(ii) provide sufficient opportunities for the general public to consider, and make representations in relation to, the issues raised by the consultation.

(4) Following the consultation under subsection (1), the Scottish Ministers must—

(a) prepare and publish a report—

(i) on representations received in response to the consultation,

(ii) setting out any action they propose to take as a result of the consultation, and

(b) lay a copy of the report before the Scottish Parliament.
